As a women-helmed technology business, WAYPOINT VENTURES is pleased to support Sound Experience and its programs aboard Adventress, and especially Girls at the Helm. It's more important than ever that girls have mentors to show them the ropes to reach success. We thank the women who serve as role models in leadership while working with participants. And, we look forward to GATH graduate resumes at Waypoint someday.

Two Buckets – One Mission

A word from the Executive Director

What do funds raised tonight support? It's an awesome question. Tonight, all of us gathered will be working and playing together in community to fill a critical bucket.

There are just two buckets in my nonprofit world. One bucket is Capital Restoration of the National Historic Landmark schooner Adventuress and the other bucket is Program Operations. I'll set aside the capital restoration bucket for a moment. Don't worry, we'll get back to it.

Each year, more than one-thousand children and teens climb aboard Adventuress for day and overnight programs. They come with their classrooms, through community-based youth partnerships, through maritime education programs and on their own. For most, it's their first time on a historic sailing ship. For many, it's an experience that stays with them, whether raising the massive sails together, taking the helm or exploring the human impact on our waterways. For some, it's life-changing.

Quality experiential programs take quality staff, professional crew and passionate educators. We subsidize every school program and offer scholarship when needed. Scholarships, staff, crew, educators, ed materials, safety equipment and training, galley stores, moorage, and routine maintenance – all coming out of the Program Operations bucket. This bucket is what delivers the highest quality on-the-water programs possible.

Tonight, we are asking your help to fill this bucket. You are powering Adventuress, filling her sails and delivering her youth mission with your support.

So what about the other bucket - the Capital Restoration? We are beyond thrilled to report that after a decade of restoration, the ship's final phase – the deck – begins in just a week. This is thanks to extraordinary support from generous individuals and family foundations, WA State Heritage Capital Projects Fund, and the National Park Service Maritime Heritage fund. This bucket still needs about $200,000 of the total $925,000 final deck phase, but this is not tonight's focus. Over the next six months, we'll be looking to close the gap with the help of our growing community.

With Adventuress' future secured, we hope you're excited to fill the Program bucket – and perhaps even cause it to overflow – to deliver powerful, life-changing programs to our region's kids.

With immense gratitude to you for being here with us tonight and for giving generously,

GIRLS AT THE HELM

By Susan Brittain

With teen hands on the ship's wheel and quiet guidance from Captain Rachael Slattery, two eighth-grade girls navigate Adventuress out into Puget Sound from Shilshole Bay Marina. On board are eighteen middle and high school students, four mentors and twelve professional crew, all female and all committed to the voyage ahead. The girls on this trip will be engaged in many aspects of STEAM programming (science, technology, engineering art and math) with support from mentors and crew as they explore Puget Sound and the Salish Sea.

"One full turn to starboard," Captain Rachael says while watching the young helmswomen bring the bow of Adventuress out onto Puget Sound. "Great job you two," she adds with a smile.

Already the deck is alive with activity. Dock lines are being coiled and neatly stowed, sails unfurled and halyards made ready. Under the watchful eye of the professional captain and crew the young students begin to work as a team. In its eighth year, Girls at the Helm (GATH) continues to be Sound Experience's most popular program. In a fun and supportive environment, it aims to inspire in teenage girls confidence, courage and leadership, and curiosity about women mentors with professional experience in STEAM, maritime and related fields.

"All hands to the main halyards!" Sam Sam Parry, the Chief Mate sings out through cupped hands. The new students are soon stationed behind seasoned crew and stand ready to haul away. The massive gaff-rigged mainsail, foresail, staysail and jib are raised, the engine is cut and all goes quiet as the sails fill. Adventuress heels slightly and heads north on a close reach. For a brief spell, all aboard are invited to be quiet, take a deep breath and find a quiet meditative spot on deck to take in their surroundings. One teen named Rain looks around awkwardly and seems completely out of her element. In no time friendships form as the girls begin to open up, first with a joke, then some smiles and more laughter. Amber, the ship's program coordinator, calls out, "Everyone assemble aft for instructions" and brings them all back to the present. There's work to be done.

One watch heads below decks to learn the ship's systems, "diesel mechanics 101," a subject foreign to most teenage girls. By the end of the trip, these girls will be familiar with how a John Deere 6-cylinder marine diesel engine operates, how to start a generator, the proper use for fresh water, gray water and black water tanks, how a windlass motor raises the anchor, how salt water is pumped topsides for deck washes, and lastly, the whole workings of the vessel's marine electrical system and the importance of the ship's twelve-volt system. Other watches focus on navigation and deck skills, and a third watch works with mentors in marine science, hauling in the plankton net and learning about marine life, microplastics and human impact on the Sound. Remarkably, on this particular afternoon, the sailors are treated to the sight of transient Orcas heading north.

That first evening at anchor, with dinner over and the galley secured, everyone gathers in the main cabin for the opportunity to get to know each other better. Teens and adults alike write on a piece of paper one emotion that they are “holding onto” before putting it into a bucket of salt water where it joins all the others to be left behind. Next, each writes down a “strength to bring aboard” which are posted on the beams of the ship for the entire trip, a daily affirmation for the journey ahead.

On this journey, Rain rises at three AM to stand anchor watch with her watch-buddies so that the ship and all its sailors can rest easy. She gazes up at shooting stars, watches the early dawn, trusts her shipmates and knows that they won’t “let you down.” These moments, among others, lead her to reflect upon returning home, “I learned not worry about what other people think about me, to always apply myself, and to take advantage of every opportunity presented to me.”

Rachael travels to the Puget Sound region from her farm in Rhode Island to lead our Girls at the Helm trips, and is proof that Adventuress' community of passionate sailors knows no boundaries. Thank you, Rachael, for your commitment to our girls and all youth, and for growing the next generation of passionate environmental stewards – whether on land or on the sea.
